Description	This module will explore the cultural, historical and material factors that contributed to the importance of Neorealist films in post-war Italian cinema – one of the most influential film movements in cinema history. It will go on to reveal the profound connections between this movement and the subsequent cine-revolution in France represented by the French New Wave. Students will analyse a range of Neorealist and New Wave films in relation to their cultural and historical context, and place them within critical debates on film form, national cinema and identities. Students will gain a thorough insight into the relation between theory and practice in these two innovative movements, and go on to discover the lasting legacy for contemporary cinema.
	 To gain an understanding of the films of this post second-world war period within their cultural and historical context. To explore their relationship to the changing structure of the Italian and French film industries. To engage in critical debates about the characteristics of Neorealist and French New Wave films. To consider the influence of Neorealism and French New Wave cinema on definitions of national cinema and identity. To gain awareness of the legacy of Neorealism and the French New Wave for subsequent cinematic movements across the world.
Learning outcomes	On successful completion of the module students will have acquired: Knowledge and Understanding: show an awareness of the critical debates pertaining to realism in Italian and French post-war cinema understand how innovation in cinema is related to politics, culture, and national identity Intellectual Skills: the capacity to select and apply the methods that structure a theoretical and aesthetic inquiry into film including the intermediary research skills of assessment and comparison of scholarly material the ability to analyse and critically evaluate ideas and arguments using module and independently sourced material

Practical Skills:
material in the library and online resources the capacity to design and present effective learning materials for group presentations (for group presentation modules) Transferable Skills: advanced oral and written communication skills (including an awareness of audience) advanced research, critical-analytical, and cognitive skills collaborative and managed work capabilities in groups On successful completion of this module, students should have developed key employability skills to facilitate access to job markets in Media and Creative Industries, Teaching, Marketing and Administration, Journalism and related fields.
